However, he had come against any "right to work law" and had been a strong friend of labor. Several top California businessmen were unhappy. Others, however, were still strong for Goody.

At this point, Nixon and friends began putting on the squeeze. They applied it in three ways:

1.-Governor Knight was brainwashed. Political "Is were taken, showing that he would lose. Ir some of the polls, Knight trailed Knowland by 2 to 1. He was told that he should not spoil his political career by a crushing, ignominious defeat.

mips on Pigilic Safety

CHARLES F. CARPENTIER Sccretary of State

It has often been said that a courteous driver is a safe driver. Courtesy on your part when be-hind a wheel may save your life and the lives of others, besides making things better for everyone

Some persons believe in "ridthe" the horn of a motor vehicle. The one time a horn should be used is when such action will evoid an accident. Obstacles cannot be blown out of the way. Also, besides being discourteous, a horn may startle a driver so much that he will lose control of his vehicle and cause an accident.

Double parking is possibly the most flagrant form of highway discourtesy. One must assume that a person who double parks is either lazy or has no regard for others. A double parked car blocks an entire lane of traffic and prevents legally parked cars from pulling away from the curve. Traffic is crowded into outer lanes with added risk of collisions.

And ladies should not take as discourteous when a man gets into the car from the curb side shead of her. He could well be killed or injured if he went around to the other side of a car on & busy street.

What had been surmise was now proven fact. Melville was firmly away from me. Don't you dare established as a blackmailer. In addition, the killer was there in Cornwall, or had been until three o'clock that morning. Check on any departures and investigate the seven other men and women who had been in New York when Melville died.

Like her husband, Lisa Hall hadn't killed anyone. Channing Hall was a public figure, a man with a high reputation for integrity. McKee told her that he could promise nothing, but he didn't think, for the present anyhow, they would have to trouble her husband

Sarah Casement didn't leave with McKee. She was staying on at the cottage. Driving down the hill alone in darkness, McKee thought about her. She was in love with Gillespie. She had been knocked for a loop when she caught sight of those two in each other's arms. Gillespie had gotten out of that one. What didn't seem to strike Miss Casement as odd-and what seemed to him peculiar to say the least-was that Gillespie had done so much, not for his uncle but for the beautiful lady who was his uncle's wife . . .

CRYSTABEL DOLWIN put on rouge and lipstick, added earrings, bracelets, a necklace, swallowed in dry throat, stepped out into the hall-and because a different woman, jangling, vacuous, beamng earnest and well-intentioned

"Inspector McKee, from New York? This is an honor, Inspector. Unless-has poor little me done something wrong? I hope I didn't keep you waiting?"

McKee reflected that she was almost too good to be true. She had been in New York when Grant Melville died, she had been on Tenth Street when Zita Warren announced her return to the city by calling down from her window; she had been here in Cornwall when Dennert was killed. But so had a number of other people. Now for Miss Dolwin's whereabouts when the attack on Miss Warren was made the previ-

She thought, finger to her lip, brow corrugated, batting her lashes. Triumph. "But that was the day I came up from New York."

FELIX SATTERLEE was in process of setting a small table drawn to the hearth when McKee arrived, and Diana Satterlee was reading a novel, lying back in an armchair, her feet on a pouf. "You've come about Grant, Inspector? We only heard last night. I'm afraid we can't be of any assistance to you. We've talked it over and we can't think of a single thing . . . There just doesn't seem to be any reason why anyone should kill Grant."

McKee stopped him. "I'm afraid that someone had a very good reason indeed for killing your former husband, Mrs. Satterlee." Without going into detail he told them about Grant Melville's blackmailing activities.

Shock, horror, disgust and loathing-they were both aghast. It was difficult to believe. Grant a blackmailer!

McKee didn't waste time. Any or all of these people he was interviewing could have killed Melville and Dennert; it was the previous Friday and the attack on Zita Warren that were important.

Kubek and Sanford Are Named Water-speed king Donald Campbell today drove his jet-powered Majors' Outstanding Rookies

the New York Yankees' "jack of mined to make good. And he did all trades," and Jack Sanford, -in a big way, right-handed curve-ball pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, today were named the major leagues' outstanding rookies for the 1957

Association of America. Kubek, who played five different positions for the Yankees this year received 23 of the 24 votes in the balloting for the American League freshman award. The other vote went to Frank Malzone of the Red Sox who was declared ineligible for the award because he had appeared in 27 games for Boston in 1956.

In the National League voting, Sanford finished first with 16 votes. The other votes were distributed among first baseman Ed Bouchee of the Phillies (four), pitcher Dick Drott of the Chicago Cubs (three) and outfielder Bob Hazle of the world champion Milwaukee Braves (one).

Kubek Outfield, Infielder

Kubek played left field, center field, shortstop, third base and second base in his first season under Casey Stengel, the Yankees' master lineup juggler. Despite all this maneuvering, he batted .297 for the American League champions.

Considered a "perfect Yankeetype player" by Stengel, Kubek wound up as the club's third leading hitter behind Mickey Mantle and Bill Skowron in his initial major league season. He had 39 runs-batted-in and his 128 hits included 21 doubles, three triples and three homers.

Sanford, like Kubek, left his native hearth to gain fame elsewhere. He was born and raised in Wellesley, Mass., a suburb of Boston, but was turned down at a Red Sox tryout camp because he was 'too small." That was in 1947. Jack then weighed only 160 pounds but has since blossomed out into a six-foot, 190-pounder.

Long Road for Jack

However, unlike Kubek, Sanford traveled a long road to the majors. After being rejected by the Red Sox, the blond New Englander signed with the Phillies and to be ready for the season's closer kicked around in their farm system for seven years before putting

FLU TREATMENT

If the Asian flu virus bites you. go to bed, drink fluids and take antifever drugs under a doctor's advice. That's the best treatment, says the A.M.A.'s special committee on influenza. It advises against taking sulfa or antibiotics-which can't do any good against the virus and might cause unpleasant eifects-and against trying to go to a hospital. Drugs may be needed if you get complications.

Some persons believe in "riding" the horn of a motor vehicle.
The one time a horn should be used is when such action will avoid an accident. Obstacles cannot be blown out of the way. Also, besides being discourteous, a horn may startle a driver so much that he will lose control of his vehicle

Double parking is possibly the most flagrant form of highway discourtesy. One must assume that a person who double parks is either lazy or has no regard for others. A double parked car blocks an entire lane of traffic and prevents legally parked cars from pulling away from the curve Traffic is crowded into outer lanes with added risk of collisions

TOM shrugged. "Not much use in my denying it now, is there? All right, I—I did go down to see Melville that afternoon, 1 intended to call his bluff, get the painting from him, and tell him that if he approached my uncle's wife again I'd go to the police. I was too late. When I got there he was dead and his body was lying on the pavement. I had to get that picture as soon as possibleand I did get it, that night. After got away safely over the roofs ripped it to pieces and burned it in the fireplace in my uncle's apartment later that evening."

Gillespie admitted to breaking nd entering and theft, but after that, look at it-" all there wasn't much else he could do. At the moment the Scotsman wasn't personally interested in these particular breaches of the law. What he was after was a killer.

What had been surmise was now proven fact. Melville was firmly established as a blackmailer. In addition, the killer was there in Cornwall, or had been until three clock that morning. Check on any departures and investigate the seven other men and women who had been in New York when Melville died.

Like her husband, Lisa Hall hadn't killed anyone. Channing Hall was a public figure, a man with a high reputation for integrity. McKee told her that he could promise nothing, but he didn't think, for the present anyhow, they would have to trouble her husband. Sarah Casement didn't leave with McKee. She was staying on at the cottage. Driving down the hill alone in darkness, McKee thought about her. She was in love with Gillespie. She had been knocked for a loop when she caught sight of those two in each other's arms. Gillespie had gotten out of that one. What didn't seem to strike Miss Casement as odd-and what seemed to him peculiar, to say the least-was that Gillespie had done so much, not for his uncle but for the beautiful lady who was his uncle's wife . . .

CRYSTABEL DOLWIN put on ouge and lipstick, added earrings, oracelets, a necklace, swallowed in dry throat, stepped out into the nall-and because a different woman, jangling, vacuous, beaming, earnest and well-intentioned. "Inspector McKee, from New

This is an honor, Inspec tor. Unless-has poor little me done something wrong? I hope I didn't keep you waiting?"

McKee reflected that she was almost too good to be true She had been in New York when Grant Melville died, she had been on Tenth Street when Zita Warren announced her return to the city by calling down from her window: she had been here in Cornwall when Dennert was killed. But so had a number of other people. Now for Miss Dolwin's whereabouts when the attack on Miss Warren was made the previ-

"Where I was last Friday, Inspector?"

"Yes, Miss Dolwin. You see, some question has arisen about Dennert, when he actually came here to Cornwall. There have been some conflicting statements, and we want to know the whereabouts of everyone in the vicinity on that

She thought, finger to her lip. brow corrugated, batting her lashes. Triumph. "But that was the day I came up from New York."

FELIX SATTERLEE was in process of setting a small table drawn to the hearth when McKee arrived, and Diana Satterlee was reading a novel, lying back in an armchair, her feet on a pouf.

"You've come about Grant, Inspector? We only heard last night. I'm afraid we can't be of any assistance to you. We've talked it over and we can't think of a single thing . . . There just doesn't seem to be any reason why anyone should kill Grant."

McKee stopped him. "I'm afraid hat someone had a very good reason indeed for killing your former husband, Mrs. Satterlee." Without going into detail he told them about Grant Melville's blackmailing activities.

Shock, horror, disgust and loathing-they were both aghast. It was difficult to believe. Grant a blackmailer!

McKee didn't waste time. Any or all of these people he was interviewing could have killed Mel ville and Dennert; it was the previous Friday and the attack on Zita Warren that were important.

"Where we were last Friday?" The Satterlees told him, and he

THE Scotsman's introduction to the Brown cottage was not propitious. He narrowly missed being hit with a cat.

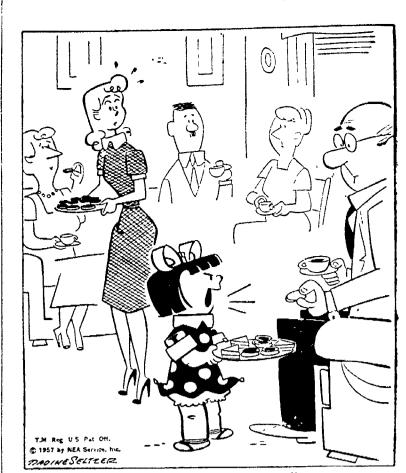

The cat whistled past the Scotsman's shoulder and landed with a thump. The door slammed. Mc-Kee liked cats. He called to it vainly. It was impossible to find in the dark, but it probably wasn't much hurt, the ground was soft He walked on. Sobbing came from behind the door now, and a woman cried, "You brute. You horrible brute. . . Poor Minnie."

"She scratched me. Look at "Where did you get that money,

Bob? You tell me you have none for the milkman, and then I put my hand in your pocket-" "I won it yesterday on a long shot." "I want some of it . . . Keep away from me. Don't you dare come near me-' has taken its toll among the cagers as it hit the Carrier Mills schools. And to top off his illness difficulties the big gun in the Wildcat scoring machine-Vern Rollins has been declared ineligible.

Rollins, senior pivot man, is a three year veteran and his absence will leave a big hole in both the offense and defense of the Carrier Mills team.

Rollins passed the first six weeks of school, but failed to keep his grades at the required level for the next couple of weeks. He may get eligible soon, but definitely will miss Saturday's game.

If illness doesn't cut further into the ranks, the Carrier Mills squad will have three seniors, four juniors and three sophomores.

Coach Willis said he would start with Jack Keene 6-0, Lewis Williams 5-11 and Charles Rann 5-11, all seniors; Junior Manier 6-0, Bob Mitchell 5-11, Jerry Randolph 6-0 and Raydean Davis 5-10, all juniors, and Bill Smith 5-10, Larry Van Hoy 5-5 and Charles Smith 5-9 sophomores.

Carrier Mills will play a regular 20-game schedule, nine at home and 11 on the road, and will participate in two tourneys. The second annual Carrier Mills holiday tourney will be played Dec. 26-27 Johnston City, Metropolis, Rosiclare and Carrier Mills the entrants and the Wildcats second tourney will be the annual Saline County affair Jan. 24-25.

Kubek and Sanford Are Named LAKE CONISTAN, England (P) -Water-speed king Donald Campbell today drove his jet-powered Majors' Outstanding Rookies Bluebird to a new world record of the New York Yankees' "jack of measured one kilometer (0.621 all trades," and Jack Sanford, miles) course. On his outward right-handed curve-ball pitcher for run he clocked 260.1 miles an hour, the Philadelphia Phillies, today and on the home run 218.024 miles were named the major leagues outstanding rookies for the 1957 season by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Kubek, who played five different positions for the Yankees this year received 23 of the 24 votes in the balloting for the American League freshman award. The other vote went to Frank Malzone of the Red Sox who was declared ineligible for the award because he had appeared in 27 games for Boston in 1956.

Eldorado Tonight In the National League voting, Sanford finished first with 16 votes. The other votes were distributed among first baseman Ed Bouchee of the Phillies (four), pitcher Dick Drott of the Chicago Cubs (three) and outfielder Bob dorado gridiron when Metropolis Hazle of the world champion Milwaukee Braves (one).

Considered a "perfect Yankeetype player" by Stengel, Kubek wound up as the club's third leading hitter behind Mickey Mantle and Bill Skowron in his initial major league season. He had 39 runs-batted-in and his 128 hits included 21 doubles, three triples and three homers.

Sanford, like Kubek, left his native hearth to gain fame elsewhere. He was born and raised in Wellesley, Mass., a suburb of Boston, but was turned down at a Red Sox tryout camp because he was "too small." That was in 1947. Jack then weighed only 160 pounds but has since blossomed out into a six-foot, 190-pounder.

Turkey Prices Lower for Thanksgiving

NEW YORK (UP)-Turkey for Thanksgiving will be plentiful and cheap this year-maybe about 5 cents a pound less than last.

While food consumers have been sky-gazing, watching Sputnik and the cost of living index do unexpected tricks, turkey prices have been going down.

Gobblers in retail stores now are at a 15-year low and supermarket merchants indicated today they may be even lower in the weeks ahead.

A record-breaking crop and a heavy stock in cold storage underlie the lowering prices.

Housewives juggling family food funds can count on big supplies, not only for Thanksgiving, but for Christmas and the New Year's holidays, market economists indi-

A big carryover stock from last year has swelled the supply. End-September stocks in storage were 33 per cent more than 1956.
